

Uned ymholi/Enquiry unit:

Writing isn't letters on paper. It's communication - Isaac Marion

Gwybodaeth a dysgu blaenorol/Prior knowledge and learning:

To prepare for this journey, consider what you already know about communicating through writing including how and where to use capital letters and full stops and spaces between words. Additionally, try and think about your own techniques for remembering how to spell certain words.

Yn ystod eich taith mi fyddwch yn ...

During your journey you will ...

1. Explore different methods of writing, before selecting which method suits you most effectively
2. Consider the importance of legible hand writing including letter formation, writing on the lines and accurately spacing words
3. Investigate the history of upper and lower case letters in order to develop your understanding of when to use the different forms and why
4. Analyze sentences grammatically in order to verify that they are complete, as well as exploring the possibilities of sentence formation
5. Consider why written text is often structured in paragraphs before experimenting with paragraph production in your own writing
6. Combine what you have learned about written communication in order to produce effective and impactful pieces of writing
7. Reflect on author Isaac Marion's assertion that 'writing isn't letters on paper. It's communication'

Yr ydym ar y daith hon oherwydd ...

We are on this journey because ...

- Writing legibly allows us to express our ideas and opinions in a myriad of ways.
- Devising techniques which help us with our spelling encourages us to think creatively and problem solve
- Improving our foundational skills such as writing, encourages us to challenge ourselves to reach higher standards and strive for excellence
- Communicating through writing is a key skill which we need in many different aspects of our lives both within and outside of school
- Breaking down writing into its different parts (for example grammatical units) allows us to experiment with sentence structures in order to effectively convey meaning
- Identifying methods of improving our writing and spelling skills allows us to become a lifelong learner

Eich tasgau/Your tasks:

Tasg/k 1: Revise for and complete a midpoint test based on letter formation, punctuation and grammar

Tasg/k 2: Produce a piece of legible writing which is grammatically and structurally sound

Homework Task/g Gwaith Cartref: Weekly spelling tests